The architecture of the building, which is a great block in aluminium, is essential and rigorous, in harmony with the activity which is carried out in it. The plot of the façades covering seems to disappear during the night; the light crosses and dematerializes the external covering. The great pillars of the shop area and the great platform of the entrance are the only elements pointed out by the light which emphasizes the structure of the first one and the curved line of the second. The façade of the main entrance is illuminated by a continuous golden light that draws to the ground the semicircular shape of the great platform of the entrance and gives to the great staircase block a suspension effect. The light for the inside follows the functions for intensity, colour and design. In the directional offices we realized a more pleasant light gotten by the employment of halogen devices for the illumination of pictures, lamps and desks, all managed in scenographies programmed by a system of bright regulation
